Karina Arden is a highly experienced barrister, focusing on criminal defence. She is experienced in both high-profile cases and those involving international clients.

She takes on all types of criminal work, both leading and junior briefs. These include financial crime (fraud, money laundering and restraint proceedings) and serious organised crime, such as multi-handed drug trafficking and importation, and sex crimes of all sorts.

She is also experienced in cases involving serious and violent crime (including murder, manslaughter, firearms, knife crime, kidnapping and false imprisonment), sexual offences of all kinds (including dealing with vulnerable complainants and defendants), robbery of all grades of seriousness, and extradition.

She is a skilled cross-examiner and negotiator. Her experience with judges, juries and witnesses, along with her international experience, enable her to obtain results against the odds.

She has been at the criminal Bar since 2004. Before this, she worked at the multinational law firm Herbert Smith (1986-2004; becoming a French avocat in 1990) and at the common law Bar (1970-1986).

In her spare time, she is passionate about travelling, fine food and wine.

R v F, C and others

Private prosecution issued by Asif Aziz, CEO of Criterion Capital and a large-scale developer, against the defendants for sundry offences ranging from threats to kill to blackmail (with regard to the defendants' attempts to recover unpaid money for building works). Applied for a stay of proceedings for abuse of process, ultimately resulting in acquittal.

R v W, 2021

Possession of firearm with intent to endanger life. Very complex case. Defendant acquitted of all counts after three days of jury deliberation.

Corporate & Financial Crime

Notable Corporate & Financial Crime cases

R v SJ

Defendant, a chartered accountant, charged with theft and fraud x 2 of £1m from his employers.

R v G & G

Defendants acquitted of fraud on Charles Saatchi and his then wife Nigella Lawson in relation to the use of credit cards. The client represented was charged with using the cards to a total value of more than £600,000. The case required skilful cross-examination of witnesses and involved numerous legal submissions under the gaze of press and public.

R v N and others

Money laundering case involving a large number of defendants who were charged with laundering money from a significant drugs conspiracy. Trial lasted many weeks. Case went to Court of Appeal on a point of material irregularity in the proceedings in relation to all the defendants.

R v C

Acquittal of a client in a multi-handed £40m mortgage fraud which involved alleged frauds against Barclays dating back ten years. Trial lasted nearly three months at Southwark Crown Court. Karina took the unusual step of asking no questions of any of the prosecution witnesses and not to call the defendant – in effect, to put the prosecution to proof.
